A Research on International Sports Space in the View of Urban Development

Research Center for Sports Finance

Liu Xin

Abstract: Modern sport becomes a prevailing urban lifestyle for the time being. Serving as the substantial foundation for various sports-related activities such as public fitness and professional events, sports space is strongly connected to the urban development. Based on the case studies of international sports space, we found out that the on-going development of modern cities stimulates both consuming and producing demands for sports space, and that the network of sports space promotes urban development through a number of channels in return. Therefore, it is crucial to evaluate the comprehensive benefits and costs for policy-makers.
